We believe moments are the new atomic unit of marketing

With funnels becoming shorter, customer experiences are being built around a collection of interchangeable, contextual, and non-sequential moments.

THE POWER OF CLV

CLV can be used across the customer journey to create and manage a portfolio of customers as an asset.

The result is a move from being descriptive to the crucial step of being predictive, where brands can anticipate what customers will do next and when.

A FORMULA FOR SUCCESS

Consumer behaviors are changing. We help you keep pace with that change by building, interpreting, and leveraging data and insights to create strategies across the customer journey.

Moments are DEG's atomic unit for experience planning

Moving from one aggregate customer journey to thousands of journeys that feels like a cohesive experience requires a new approach to designing creative briefs and creating content.

Instead of prioritizing episodic campaign content, marketers are moving to a "moment-orientation," by building winning experiences around a collection of interchangeable, contextual, non-sequential moments.

	THEN	NOW	NEXT
	TOUCHPOINTS	JOURNEYS	EXPERIENCES
ORIENTATION	Campaigns	Channels	MOMENTS
PLANNING CYCLE	Ad Hoc	Sequential	Iterative
EXECUTION	Episodic	Cross-Channel	Always On

Regardless of the context, every moment has three core elements

Marketers must move beyond traditional campaign-based execution models and meet customers at the time and places that matter to them most. Moment mapping is the only true way to do this in an adaptive way.
